'Doors' break-out

Oliver Stone's time-tripping "The Doors" opened to strong boxoffice of about $9.6 million on only 840 screens, according to industry estimates for the weekend. The per-screen average for the film about Jim Morrison and his fellow riders on the storm was near $11,500, the estimates said. Meanwhile, in Dallas, officials said they will decide Tuesday if museum exhibits should be moved to allow Stone to film portions of the drama "JFK" in the former book depository used by presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald. The film will star Kevin Costner.
